Graph: who can influence whom?

Contact is not enough. Timing and content determine what propagates.

Medium: where does influence travel?

Artifact reads and writes induce an effective interaction graph even without direct messages.

Organization: how was the policy obtained?

Designed
Human-specified roles, delegation rules, permissions

Learned
Training changes orchestration or collaboration policies

Emergent
Runtime conventions and divisions of labor arise in traces

The three origins can operate within one system. A shared medium or a hierarchical trace does not, by itself, identify the origin of organization.